Chiropractic Future Participates in Historic National Health Policy Discussion with MAHA Leaders

Washington, D.C. — Chiropractic Future (CF) joined national healthcare leaders, policymakers, and representatives from the Make America Healthy Again (MAHA) movement for a landmark discussion focused on advancing solutions to combat the chronic disease crisis in the United States.

The meeting, which has been publicly highlighted in recent coverage (see: In Historic Event: MAHA and Chiropractic... via The MAHA Report), reflects a growing national focus on prevention, access, and whole-person care.

Why Chiropractic Future Was at the Table

Chiropractic Future is focused on advancing access, improving reimbursement, and positioning chiropractic as an essential, evidence-informed component of the healthcare system.

With musculoskeletal conditions and chronic pain among the leading drivers of healthcare spending, CF emphasized the importance of integrating chiropractic care as a frontline solution within broader national health strategies.

The Importance of This Moment

This meeting represents a significant step toward aligning chiropractic with a larger national movement focused on:

- Addressing the root causes of chronic disease
- Reducing reliance on opioids and invasive interventions
- Expanding access to preventative and conservative care

“As conversations around the future of healthcare continue to evolve, Chiropractic Future is committed to ensuring patients have greater access to safe, effective, and cost-efficient care,” said Dr. Thomas Wetzen, Chiropractic Future Leadership Chair. “The MAHA movement highlights the important role chiropractic can play in improving the health of our nation, and being part of this conversation helps ensure patients have access to these care options.”
